It's been a busy month at With Understanding Comes Calm. We've spent a lot of time spreading the word about finding strengths and teaching to the gift and meeting with parents to support them in raising their awesome 2e kids.

In this edition of "Gifted and Distractible" check out:

- Photos from our 2e movie screening in Potomac.
- A link to purchase tickets and learn about our upcoming April 5 SCREENING EVENT in Bethesda, MD.
- Julie's latest blog, "Smart Dog," celebrating learning differences and teaching to the strength.
- An article considering whether higher expectations and more intense schooling contribute to ADHD diagnoses.
- Julie's latest book recommendation.
- Stanford University's GiftedandTalented.com latest "expert pick."
- Julie's review of "2e: Twice Exceptional" in 2e Newsletter.
- An amazing upcoming conference SENG - Supporting the Emotional Needs of the Gifted in Williamsburg, Va. this July.
- Survey of interest for a Parent Empowerment Group.

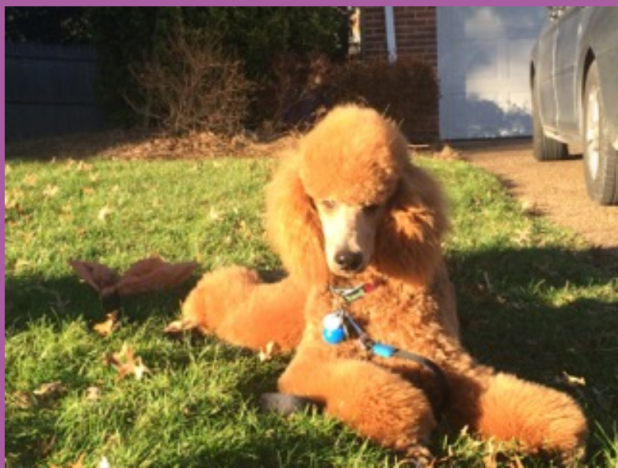

We had a great turn out at our

Over 100 people waiting to see "2e: Twice Exceptional" at the screening of "2e: Twice Exceptional" for the Disability Awareness and Inclusion event at Beth Shalom in Potomac, MD.

Julie's latest (whimsical) blog, "Smart Dog" takes a look at giving up versus celebrating strengths in guide dogs and gifted kids! <http://withunderstandingcomescalm.com/smart-dog/>

Have higher expectations and more intense schooling contributed to ADHD diagnoses? Check out this recent article in Healthday: <http://consumer.healthday.com/kids-health-information-23/attention-deficit-disorder-adhd-news-50/could-adults-expectations-drive-adhd-diagnoses-708321.html>

Book Recommendation

Fish in a Tree

by Linda Mullaly Hunt looks at how a teacher brings self esteem back to a bright girl with dyslexia by finding her strengths and using them to celebrate her and help her access reading. Keep a box of tissues nearby!
